Coasial Mississippi unifies on nuclear issue

By WAYNE DICCOMB JR.

All municipal and county governments in reastly synthyset Mississippi are unifying in opposition to nuclear waste disposal in Mississippi.

The U.S. Department of Energy is proposing cetablishment of nuclear waste disposal sites in two Mississippi salt domes east and south of Hatlisabore.

The dome south of Hattleeburg is located just about 70 miles northeast of Hancock County in Gamp Shelby's tank firing range.

Leaders of Coastlans Against Nuclear Disposal say, the sait dome storage could cause radioactive in-filtration into squafers which supply potable water here and also pollute the Pearl River Basin area which follows

Hancock County's weeten loving. The only southwest Mississipping overnment surties not yet officially opposing the disposal moreosal and the Cities of Flass Christian and Poplar ville, but both of these tewns are expected to con soon in opposition to the plan.

SOLAR HOUSE

Since the large expanse of glass on the south wall of the typical solar home admits a great well of solar radiation year found, it is impossion that steps be taken in the design and construction of the dyelling to control summer sunlight. This is usually done by some means of shading such as awnings, roof overhang, sun screens and landscaping.

These are effective to varying degrees, and the effectiveness of any depends upon how well it keeps out the summer sun. out the summer sun.

Roof Overhang

In any well designed passive solar home, the horizontal roof overhang just above the glass area of the south wall. The roof overhang is generally regarded as one of the simplest means of shading the south-facing glass will m summer when the sun is high overhead. Sometimes the overhang is constructed to tilt upwards slightly, and this is even more effective because it will not only shade them. glass wall in summer but will serve as a reflector in with winter to pour more solar radiation into the build.

inter to pour more sour rausayes, g's interior.

Adjustable overhangs may be better solutions to summer shading because they can be regulated for seasonal variations of solar radiation, but such overhangs are more expensive

A simpler variation of the adjustable overliang is a trellis with deciduous vines that have leaves in spring and summer but shed them in the fall and spring and summer but shed them in the fall and winter so that the sun's rays can warm the failling's interior when warmth is needed When a vine-covered irellis overthing is used, it is necessary to trin the vines periodically so that they do not grow too thick and block off lie winter sun.

Interior Methods

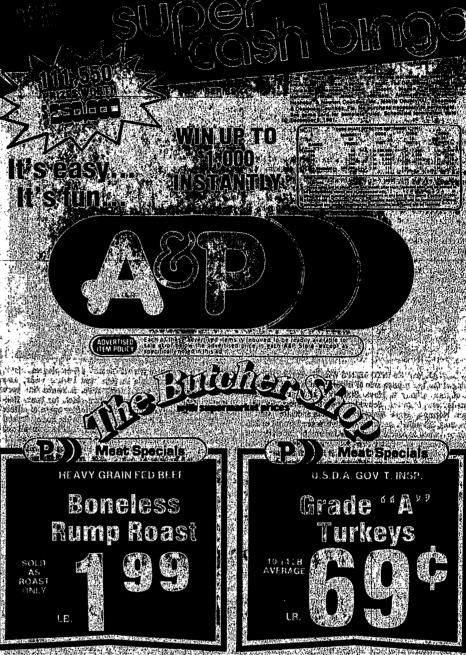

Shading can also be achieved from the interior side of the glass wall by use of window shades, Venetian blinds, draperies and movable manels.

uniding.

Though the glass area of the south walf requires proper shading in the summer, shading of window, areas on the east and west sides of the building is just as important. While over-hangs can help shade the east and west sides of a structure, properly situated frees and shrabe should also be used to block the law morning summer sum as well as the late afternoon rays. Other suitable means of shadingleast and west glass areas are wyrings, vertical lowers and cotterior curtains that can, be raised and lowered.
